Sick Society

Most British nationalists have no respect for the current Royal family who, in many ways, deserve no respect owing to the lack of leadership that a monarch is expected to display. Instead of defending their subjects, the indigenous population of these isles, the monarchy has kept silent about the invasion by foreigners of all colours and creeds which we have had to suffer. Despite this disillusionment, many of the older generation of nationalists still adhere to the time honoured tradition of watching the monarch's Christmas speech on television.

Now, in Britain's sick society, we had an alternative to the monarch's Christmas speech to watch. Enter King Neville and Queen Doreen, the "alternative Royal Family". Their speech, presented by Channel 4 as "an alternative Christmas message", was a lecture on racism in Britain today.

The Lawrences act as if they are the only parents ever to have lost a son in a violent confrontation. No message of sympathy was forthcoming for the parents of Richard Everitt, a white teenager who was murdered by Asian youths. No mention of PC Keith Blakelock, a white police officer who was murdered by black thugs, and whose family also grieve for a loved one lost.

It seems that King Neville and Queen Doreen are not prepared to publicly offer sympathy to white victims of racial violence but are prepared to milk public sympathy themselves.

The loss of a family member in any circumstances is tragic, but normal people grieve and then get on with their lives.

Just who do these people think they are?

King Neville and Queen Doreen.

Public Enquiries

With the Stephen Lawrence bandwagon slowly grinding to a halt, we hope, the extreme-left and those that earn their living protesting about real or perceived racism are looking for another cause to propel them back into the media spotlight. Unfortunately for them, Asian political activists are keeping the Ricky Reel campaign close to home and are unwilling to share the small amount of limelight generated to date. So the best the left can come up with at the moment is a demand for a public enquiry into the death, twenty years ago, of SWP activist Blair Peach.

Older members will recall Peach died whilst taking part in a violent SWP demonstration in Southall, Middlesex. No one was charged with his death but many believe that if the SWP had not decided to oppose the National Front's democratic rights then Peach would still be alive today.

Will they get their enquiry? Of course they will! The current Home Secretary, Jack Straw, supported the SWP's demands twenty years ago whilst just a backbench MP, and I have no doubt that he will bow to their wishes today.

Incidentally, I have written to Mr Straw suggesting that as the growing trend is for more public enquiries into unsolved deaths then how about holding one to look into the death of Albert Marriner, a British nationalist who was killed in May 1983 by a brick thrown by a political opponent, and whose murderer has never been brought to justice.

We will print his reply.

DAVE BRUCE

It was with great sadness that we received news of the recent death of Dave Bruce.

Dave was never a member of the League of St George and in fact he disagreed with some of our policies, particularly our views on Europe. Nevertheless, Dave always showed kindness and friendship towards the League often inviting us to political and social events.

Permission to sell League wares at these events was readily granted by Dave, but not before he had solicited a donation towards first the NF and in later years the BNP. Dave's fundraising activities were nothing short of legendary

Dave Bruce cared passionately about Britain and her people and will be sorely missed in our struggle.

Police Warn Elderly People "Don't Go Out Alone"

As Britain heads towards the Millennium, one police division in England's capital city has issued a warning to elderly residents not to go out on to the streets alone, or risk becoming victims of Asian thugs. Effectively, the police have declared a "No Go Zone" for elderly Britons living in the Bethnal Green district of East London.

The warning follows a spate of attacks by Asian thugs on elderly, mainly white, women over the past few months.

In the latest of these attacks a 75 year old lady was surrounded by a gang of Asian thugs and robbed and beaten. This occurred in broad daylight and in a busy street.

A 62 year old lady suffered extensive injuries when she fought back against a mob of Asian thugs who attacked her. For her courage, she was kicked mercilessly.

Another woman was beaten about the face during an attempt to steal her handbag

In similar incidents, a 65 year old woman and a 61 year old, were both attacked by Asian thugs just yards from the busy Aldgate station. In all of these cases, no members of the predominantly Asian population have been reported as coming forward to help, prompting speculation that the thug's behaviour has the silent approval of many members of the Asian community.

Bethnal Green police are now being accused of abdicating their responsibility for maintaining law and order by issuing the following warning to elderly women. "Don't go out alone. If you are going shopping try to go with someone else. Carry as little valuables as possible and carry only an amount of cash necessary for your shopping".

Local residents told League Sentinel, "We believe the police are more interested in maintaining race relations than enforcing the law. If the attackers had been white and the victims Asian then the attacks would have been uprated to that of racial attacks and more resources would have been made available to catch the thugs".

Police warning as gang targets women

CHILD gangs who launch terrifying mugging attacks on lone women have forced police to make an urgent 'don't go out alone' warning.

At least six robberies are thought to be by the same gang - all Asian and aged between 10 and 16.

They surround women out shopping on their own and try to bully them into handing over their bags.

Police say women should not to go out alone on shopping trips if possible until the gang have been caught and to stick to the main streets.

Sgt Brian Bull at Bethnal Green police, said "If you are going shopping try and go with someone else and if you're going to carry a handbag carry as little amount of valuables as possible - carry only what's essential for the shopping."

He also advised people with shoulder bags to put the strap over the head so the bag is more difficult to snatch.

The gang have struck with a series of daylight robberies near the Royal London Hospital and also around the Aldgate end of Commercial Street.

The latest attack was on a 75-year-old on Tuesday when the gang surrounded the woman in a lower block lobby near Commercial Street and took her bag.

Many of their victims have been elderly but there have been two attempted robberies on women in their 20s and 30s by the bold as brass kids who began their reign of terror a month ago.

A 32 year old was slapped round

Local MP Is Daughter Of U.S. Draft Dodger

It has been revealed that the Labour MP for Bethnal Green, Oona King, is the daughter of a US "draft dodger". Oona's father, Preston King, was refused student deferment from the draft in the late 1950s and sentenced to 18 months in prison for refusing to serve in the United States armed forces.

Mr King jumped bail and fled to England.

Asian Schoolboy Upsets Race Lobby

An Asian schoolboy upset Britain's race lobby by inviting a leading member of the British National Party to address a meeting of his school's Society for the Study of Sociology.

The Asian sixth-form pupil of the exclusive Dulwich College, where parents pay fees of up to £14,000 a year, invited a speaker from the BNP after the school had previously invited speakers from the Socialist Workers Party and their puppet, the Anti-Nazi League.

The BNP was represented by press officer, Mike Newlands, who lectured the pupils on "communal human rights" and advocating the need for all societies to have a homeland.

Mr Newland's speech was received by the 200 hundred pupils attending, with interest and the audience applauded the speaker at the end of the meeting. Mr Newlands was thanked for attending by the Asian pupil.

Mr Chris Field, the Deputy Headmaster said that teachers attending the meeting commented that "the boys realised they were listening to an intelligent man".

Predictably, the meeting was condemned by the head of the taxpayer funded Commission for Racial Equality, who, whilst advocating equality in race, oppose equality in political awareness.

The once reliable Times newspaper, carried a fictitious report of the meeting in which they suggested that pupils had booed and heckled the BNP speaker, but this lie was exposed via an indignant letter to the editor from the headmaster of Dulwich College, Graham Able, who said that he was delighted that his pupils had behaved "with the courtesy normally accorded to a guest"

The Asian pupil, who must remain unnamed to protect him from physical attack from left-wing opponents of democracy, has been quoted as saying, "This country is all about free speech. We must have the right to listen to speakers from all spectrums of politics. I have no regrets about inviting a BNP speaker".

ITP Upsets Humberside Homosexuals

Proposals to open a "gay and lesbian pub" in the seaside resort of Bridlington have met stern opposition from local people via a campaign alleged to have been organised by the International Third Position.

The campaign was reported in the oddly named Bridlington Free Press, (It isn't free, it costs 32p) and claims that menacing stickers and posters featuring a cartoon of a large boot stamping on a man's head and accompanied by the caption "Stamp Out Fags in Bridlington", were being distributed by the International Third Position.

The campaign was launched following an article in the local press which invited residents to voice their opinions on plans by a Bridlington woman, Jenny Jones, to open a gay and lesbian pub in the town. Most residents greeted the proposals with hostility, much to the annoyance of the local press.
Within days of the proposals being made public, stickers and posters appeared throughout the town opposing the plan and giving a contact telephone number.
According to the Free Press this phone number was traced by "Gary" Robson of Searchlight (better known as Tony Robson) to the Manchester offices of the ITP. Robson then claimed that "The Third Position is one of the more violent of the far-right groups and have members who have served time in prison for violent offences. They also have contacts with paramilitary groups in Europe".

Greater Manchester police are investigating complaints that the material promotes violence but police Superintendent Kevin Hart admitted that, "It is very difficult to secure a conviction in this type of case".
A local councillor, Ian Male, condemned the material saying, "We have to be a tolerant society". When Councillor Male was contacted by League Sentinel asking if his advocacy of tolerance would extend to inviting members of the Third Position to a debate on homosexuality, Councillor Male suddenly became extremely intolerant.

The hostile reaction by Bridlington residents and the comments by Searchlight's Tony, or Gary Robson, has so frightened the aspiring, mine host, Ms Jenny Jones, that she has now shelved her plans to open the pub.

West Midlands Borough Gets Holocaust Award

The West-Midlands borough of Walsall has been awarded the dubious honour of being the best borough in the country for "raising the awareness of the holocaust".
The award, presented by the Anne Frank Educational Trust, and funded by the taxpayers of the European Union, will provide Walsall council with even more Holocaust propaganda for their schools.

Labour party officials in Walsall have been severely embarrassed by the arrest of party activist and local magistrate, Ajmel Sodhi, on charges of fraud.
Sodhi, who owns BDS Pharmacy, in Walsall has been charged with attempting to defraud the Inland Revenue of £400,000.

NATIONAL SOCIALISM AS

Those who view National Socialism as nothing more than a political movement of the 1920s and 30s know nothing of it whatsoever. Adolf Hitler believed we had come to a turning point in history and, with that perception of the infinite, foresaw a great metamorphosis of mankind. For Hitler, the Aryan was based on a biological mysticism whereby the coming age of the Aryan was to reveal itself at the end of an epoch. What had lasted for thousands of years, man's solar period, was coming to an end and the new age would produce the new man.

At the core of National Socialism was a view of existence of such immeasurable profundity that it took on more of a religious perspective than that of a mere political dogma. Savitri Devi, the subject of a recent biography, discovered this aspect of National Socialism as a consequence of her conversion to Hinduism in the early 1930s. In Hinduism the swastika remains as that potent symbol of the cyclic rhythm of nature and it was no coincidence that Savitri Devi recognised the significance in Hitler's choice of the swastika as the eternal symbol of National Socialism and Aryan fulfilment.

The Swastika. The Eternal Symbol Of National Socialism And Aryan Fulfilment.

In this age of materialism, where money dominates human existence and the religious perspective is diminished, man merely exists, cut off from his true cultural roots. The ancients understood the rhythm of the cosmos with an intuition. For them, all civilisations were part of a divine cosmic order subject to the eternal struggle of order over chaos ... not a lineal course for "progress", one age preceded by another, but rather the ebb and flow of history as civilisations rise and fall.

For Savitri Devi, Hitler had an important role in this cosmic order, being "the man against time", according to Hindu cosmology. In her book, The Lightning and the Sun, there were three main personalities representing the cosmic cycle ... the Egyptian pharaoh Akhnaton, Genghis Khan and Adolf Hitler. To understand the role of Hitler in the great cosmic struggle it is necessary to explain the metaphysics of the Hindu concept. In the beginning was the Golden Age, the Satya Yuga, from which proceded many thousands of years of stagnation, chaos and corruption. The struggle to return to the Golden Age has been personified by the three protagonists in a succession of ages within the Kali Yuga, the Age of Darkness. Akhnaton represented the "man above time", the religious reformer who longed for a return to the Golden Age, a visionary and idealist. Genghis was the "man in time", lacking idealism and representing destruction. Hitler, on the other hand, was a synthesis of the former two, combining idealism with force but struggling against the cyclic tide of his age. Savitri Devi believed that his struggle was foredoomed but that National Socialist prophesy, as yet unfulfilled, awaits the future avatar, the incarnation of a god.

It is significant that Hitler declared in 1928 that, "I am not he; but while nobody comes forward to prepare the way for him, I do so".

Adolf Hitler. "I Am Not He; But While Nobody Comes Forward To Prepare The Way For Him, I Do So".

ESOTERIC PROPHESY

There is no doubt that Hitler often thought in metaphysical terms. Reminiscent of Nietzsche, he declared with the spirit of the prophet, "Creation is not yet at an end, not so far that Man is concerned. A new variety of man is beginning to seperate out. The existing type of man is passing into the biological state of atrophy ... all creative energy will be concentrated into the new one. One will sink into a sub-human race ... and the other rise above the man of today". To appreciate the depth of National Socialism, it is necessary to understand Hitler's cosmic purpose. He struggled for a return to the Golden Age against all the odds ... but with that intuitive power he declared himself as only the drummer (Der Trommler) of the movement ... "preparing the way for him".

It is the duty of all National Socialists to keep alight that flame, Savitri Devi declared, ready for the day when Hitler's sacrifice shall be avenged and the future avatar triumphs alongside the last National Socialists of iron will, forged through sacrifice and persecution ... the Avatar of Kalki, the Avenger!

The ancient Hindu text, Visnu Purana, describing the Kali Yuga, accurately describes our own present state of decay but offers hope at the end of that age. Written centuries ago, it stated: "Wealth (inner) and piety will decrease day by day until the whole world will be entirely depraved ... then property alone will confer rank; wealth will be the only source of devotion; passion will be the sole bond between the sexes; falsehood will be the only means of litigation... Earth will be venerated but for its mineral treasures ...men will fix desires upon riches, even though dishonestly acquired" ... and so forth.

But this Hindu text also refers to a caste of men who retain their purity at the end of the Kali age. They are the new heroes and warriors who stand aloof from the decay of the present age in anticipation of a renewal. They are the men who are changed, as in Hitler's prophesy, and "by virtue of that peculiar time shall be as seeds of new human beings and shall give birth to a race who shall follow the laws of the age of purity".

Saitri Devi Viewed National Socialism As More Of A Religious Perspective Than A Political Dogma. This Viewpoint Is Still Embraced By Many Today.

Sir Oswald Mosley and

There still survive in Europe men with vision, courage and leadership, who know and can interpret history and from the lessons of history plan for the future. These men are united in their desire to unite Europe. Today, all nations between Russia and the Atlantic coast are comparatively small nations. It is folly for them to continue to exist as feeble national entities, overshadowed as they were from the East by the former Soviet Union and from the West by the United States of America. Europeans must combine if their homeland is to survive. When Europe achieves union she will not only live again, with the civilised heritage of nearly 3,000 years, besides which the refinements of the life of America are those of a parvenu and those of Russia, scarcely disguised material barbarism.

Sir Oswald Mosley was first. Out of the ashes of an unnecessary war emerged a band of men who had "no blood on their hands from the brothers' war" ... men who had endured persecution and misrepresentation but who maintained a noble ideal within their hearts. The year 1948 was the cornerstone when the narrower nationalism of the Fascist creed gave way to a new vision borne out of the divisions leading up to the catastrophe of 1939. Europe A Nation was the slogan coined by Mosley and first used in a speech on 16th October, 1948. Previously, in an essay entitled The Extension of Patriotism, the idea of kinship, he wrote, "We were divided and we are conquered. That is the tragic epitaph of two war generations: words which should adorn the graves of the youth of Europe. That was the fate of my generation in 1914, and the doom of a new generation of young soldiers in 1939. The youth of Europe shed the blood of their own family and the jackals of the world grew fat. Those who fought are in the position of the conquered, whatever their country. Those who did not fight, but merely profited, alone are victorious"

The permanent theme throughout Mosley's political thought, and throughout his life since 1918, was the idea of brotherhood bound together through union. This was the essence of the pre-war Fascism and that lofty principle took him to the idea of European Union ... not a rejection of Fascism but a transcendence, carrying forth the idea of brotherhood to what he termed, the extension of patriotism. He questioned the position of Fascism in the post-war world in the light of the catastrophe of 1945. There was no doubt that pre-war Fascism was too narrow ... far too national ... too concerned with following the interests of each nation-state. This, he believed, divided natural friends and brothers.

He wrote, "The idea of kinship is the true idea; the reaching out to those who are kindred or of the same kind. The idea of kinship can bring the Union of Europe where the old internationalism failed. As a family of the same stock and kind Europe should always have been united. Today the real as well as the ideal faces Europe with the alternative of union or disaster.

Mosley Advocated "European Union" Fifty Years Ago

So must come a new union of mind and spirit, not only to avoid destruction, but for purposes of construction ..."

"We love our countries, but we must extend that love; the ideal and practical alike now compel it. the extension of patriotism; that is the necessity and that is the hope. The new patriotism will extend to embrace all of like kind, but will not destroy the values of its kind by seeking the unnatural mingling of the old internationalism".

That was written on 1st January, 1947. More than fifty years later, the title "European Union" is a sham. British governments continue to act the lick-spittle of Washington and all their nefarious meddling in the affairs of other nations. The idea of kinship is undermined by relentless waves of illegal immigration under the guise of "asylum seeking", imposing both economic and cultural problems ... the consequences of which can only erode the stability and permanence of our European identity. The collapse of Communism in the East has opened up a Pandora's box of ills ... transcending our frontiers in the West.

Globalisation is the new faith and economic instability is the result.

The European Idea:

It is still the bankers world and chaos is the means by which they flourish. Sir Oswald Mosley was right those many years ago and his message rings true today.

In 1955 he wrote, "What, then, do we all want? The Russians say they want the Americans out of Europe and peace. So do we but not on the condition that instead we have the Russians in Europe. American occupation is humiliation: Russian occupation is death. Suicide is not the only escape from shame. Let all Europe be the buffer area between West and East, the third force that holds the balance of the world. That is the final solution for which we have always stood".

Britons Campaign For European Union

But our successive British governments maintain that state of humiliation, touching the forelock to American presidents, even in the face of opposition from some other European states. With the collapse of the Soviet Union and its satellite states, there is no moral reason why the United States should have a foothold in Europe, militarily or otherwise. Whilst looking askance at the corruption and decay of the new Russian Federation, they seek new bogeymen in the Middle East with every lie and distortion the craven press and media can employ. And what does Europe do? This so-called "European Union"? It is as divided as ever without any common foreign or miltary policy and is thus impotent to fully protect itself.

Problems such as the Middle East should be viewed from a European standpoint and not from an imperialist Zionist/American interest. As in 1939, when Mosley declared Mind Britain's Business, so the rest of the world should be considered in terms of the interests of Europe alone. Such a policy would be totally different to that of America ... and certainly Israel ... and would engender peace and security in that area because the interests of Europe could not possibly be threatened.

In 1956 Mosley wrote, "All of this depends on the unity of European policy and the recognition of two clear truths. The first is that, for us all, the maintenance of the life of Europe is the most important thing in the world. The second is that the strength of Russia is a vital threat to this life and that it is the final and unchanging policy of the Soviets to destroy our European life. If the massacre of the heroic Hungarians at last brings home these truths to the mind and spirit of Europe the vast tragedy of that superb death will not have been in vain".

Further, he declared,"Hypnotised by the past, the British government has thus abandoned the present. They have failed to devise a united European policy and they have quarrelled with the Arabs over something that did not matter (Suez). Those of the Islamic faith are our natural friends and allies in the face of Communism ... which challenges equally their beliefs and their civilisation. It was a monumental folly to discard that friendship for the illusions of an obsolete. There is but one true policy in the Middle East; the union of all the European powers in strength and solidarity on the left flank of Russia, and the closest friendship with the sister Arab peoples whose interest is identical".

Europe can only be liberated through union ... a union of kindred people ... and its strength and power can only be consolidated through independence. Independent of America and the global system dictating the policies of internationalism. Mosley was right then and he is equally right now!

"The idea of kinship can bring the Union of Europe." Sir Oswald Mosley.

De Gaulle's Grandson To Stand For FN

The grandson of the former French president and wartime resistance leader, Charles De Gaulle, has shocked the French establishment by stating that he is willing to stand as a candidate for the Front National in the forthcoming European Parliamentary elections.

Fifty year old Mr De Gaulle, also named Charles after his famous grandfather, is currently a Euro-MP for the anti-Maastrict Movement. As a MEP he has already supported FN leader, Jean-Marie Le Pen, by voting against proposals to lift his European parliamentary immunity, which would allow Mr Le Pen to be prosecuted by the German government for allegedly making "denigrating remarks about the Holocaust", an offence considered almost as serious as murder by the German authorities.

It is claimed that Mr De Gaulle intends standing for the FN because he believes it to be the only true patriotic party in France.

Ironically, his younger brother, Jean, is also an MP for the Chirac led, Gaullist-RPR party. Suggestions that he too may follow his brother into the FN have been denied.

With the Front National attracting some 15% of the national vote and sharing power in four regional assemblies some Gaullist-RPR officials have been pressing their leader Jacques Chirac to enter into an electoral pact with the FN, fearing that otherwise the nationalist vote would be split. So far Mr Chirac has resisted these proposals but he may be forced to change his decision if he loses any more high profile candidates to the FN .

Searchlight Asset Refuses Christmas Parole

Convicted IRA terrorist, Jan Taylor, mysteriously refused an offer of Christmas parole, preferring to spend the festival in prison.

Taylor was jailed for 30 years in 1994 for his part in the bombing of Harrods store in London, and a British rail train travelling from Victoria to Ramsgate.

Before his arrest, Taylor and his terrorist companion, Pat Hayes, were both active members of the extreme-left group, Red Action. Regular League Sentinel readers will recall that at this time, Red Action and the Searchlight organisation were working closely together but, following Hayes and Taylor's arrest, Searchlight's frantic attempts to distance themselves from Red Action/IRA led by Searchlight columnist, Ray Hill, caused some resentment.

This resentment intensified when Red Action learned that during the whole time of their involvement with Searchlight the latter was passing information on the Trotskyist group to the Security Services.

I.6 Million Germans Vote Nationalist

Over I.6 million Germans cast their votes for nationalist candidates in recent regional and local elections, causing alarm and despondency amongst the Federal authorities.

The Republikaner (REP) party, led by Rolf Schlierer, attracted the largest nationalist vote receiving 905,000 votes. REP strongholds appear to be in Berlin, Bavaria and Baden-Wurtenberg. Their success appeared to be achieved by a very professional high-tech campaign, aimed at exposing the increasing cost to the German taxpayer of the tens of thousands of economic refugees that have been allowed to stay in Germany by the left-wing government.

Gerhard Frey, leader of the Deutsche Volksunie, (DVU) was disappointed with the party's result in Sachsen-Anhalt region, where they attracted only 3% of the vote against the 14% that it had attracted in April 98

The DVU aimed its campaign at the working districts of large towns such as Berlin and Lichtenberg, where it gained 9% and 19% respectively and was reported to have attracted some 5% of votes cast by first time voters (ie: young people) in several areas of Eastern Germany.

The DVU are now planning talks with Rolf Schlierer of the REP to propose closer co-operation between the two parties. It is doubtful if this will result in an amalgamation but it could lead to an electoral pact being established between them. A prospect which is sending shivers down the spines of German anti-fascists.

The Nationaldemokratische Partei, (NPD) concluded their election campaign with a march and rally in the town of Rostock, with over 3000 party members attending. Given pride of place at the head of the march was NPD candidate, Manfred Roeder. A long time comrade of the League of St George. The march was spearheaded by members of the party's youth movement the Junge Nationaldemokraten (JN).

Such is the fearsome street-fighting reputation of the NMP/JN that the small group of anti-fascists who had planned a counter march decided to abandon their protest at the very last minute.

The NPD attracted a total of 126,000 votes, gaining two seats on the local council in Brandenburg, two seats in Furstenwalde and following a violent campaign in Frankfurt in which NPD electoral officers fought a running battle with anti-democratic students, they gained one seat.

Party leader, Udo Voigt, stated that he was not disappointed with the result and looked forward to the party improving its vote in the Saxony regional elections due to be held later this year.

Federal Germany's Shameful Record Of Human Rights Abuse

In Germany today, one of the most heinous crimes that one can commit is that of questioning the Holocaust. Despite decades of oppression and the loss of civil liberties under the Communist regime, the new "democratic" Federal government still persecutes those who seek or speak the truth.

In 1994, over 2,000 Germans were persecuted for questioning the authorised version of the Holocaust.

In 1996, this figure rose to 5,635.

To this offence, an additional charge of "propaganda offences" was included on the statute books to give the State the opportunity to persecute and prosecute Germans citizens expressing politically incorrect opinions.

This extra piece of legislation extended the total victims of State political persecution to 7,888 in 1997.

It would appear from this shameful record that the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights has yet to reach the "New" Germany.

From our German Correspondent.

Kosher Porky Pies

In the last issue we touched on the subject of one Binjamin Wilkomorski, a fraudster and hoaxer. To remind our readers, Wilkomorski is the author of a book recounting his alleged experiences in "Nazi death camps". Without any questioning, his book, "Fragments", became a best-seller because it was thought unthinkable that anyone Jewish would actually fabricate a phoney tale for profit. Well, now they all know ... and with this precedent we wonder how many other Holocaust stories are downright lies.

In several European states the penalty for simply questioning the authenticity of tales from the Holocaust is several years in the slammer. For being caught out making up stories about the Holocaust, at least in terms of personal accounts, the response is little more than an embarrassed silence. The pack of lies fabricated by Wilkomorski was even translated into twelve languages and was put on the reading lists in schools and he was regarded as a hero within Jewish communities. "Fragments" was supposed to describe his childhood experiences in Auschwitz and Majdanek concentration camps, written appropriately in sparse and simple language with the usual emphasis on unimagineable horror. The simple narrative with its lack of detail made the story virtually uncheckable. The Swiss journalist, Daniel Ganzfried, smelled a rat and did some checking on his own to discover that Wilkomorski spent the entire period of 1939-1945 in splendid comfort in neutral Switzerland, never seeing even a cattle truck.

The fact that so many people will swallow any Holocaust tale without question is disturbing to say the least, especially after reading the naïve responses to the initial publication of this travesty of an "experience". On the level of an entry in Private Eye's Pseud's Corner, one reviewer suggested it was so profound, moving and morally important "... that I wondered if I even had the right to offer praise". He would have done better to have offered criticism but any Holocaust story is now cocooned in that selfrighteous mindset which regards any objective questioning as a symptom of mental disorder ... and, of course, antisemitism.

Upon his exposure as a downright liar, Wilkomorski's lawyers begged that he be left alone in case all the furore affected his health. Even the journalist Ganzfried who originally exposed the fraud suggested that Wilkomorski may have genuinely believed he was in a camp ... which leads us to a phenomenon now seriously considered as a mental disorder.

In America, "experts" employ a method called Recovered Memory Therapy to assist those survivors of unspeakable horrors to recover all the facts when all they have are blurred spectres of the past. Even though more enlightened psychiatrists view this method with grave scepticism, Wilkomorski confessed to using this therapy to recover his childhood memories. The method has now been exposed as an encouragement to invent the past and to conceal the most appalling lies under the cloak of medical charlatanism. There is another condition referred to as False Memory Syndrome which is more all less the same mental disease afflicting Wilkomorski and, no doubt, countless others. Steeped in the lore imposed upon us through an endless torrent of Holocaust propaganda, an entire generation is exposed to an imagery firmly implanted in the psyche. Wilkomorski's "extraordinary knowledge" of the Holocaust was obviously gleaned from this source and it only needed a good dose of "recovered memory therapy" to make him a virtual participant in the drama. In an interview he claimed he had only visual memories ... and we know where the visions come from. His publishers still can not accept that the book is fantasy and the Board of Deputies whisper, "If there has been a conscious deception it would be despicable". The book is still on the non-fiction list and probably still being touted around our schools. In the meantime, the silence is deafening.

Food for thought: How many times do you need to watch Schindler's List to actually believe you were on a wagon to the camp? ... And how much lucre is there in publishing the resultant virtual reality? Answers on a postcard to the Simon Wiesenthal Centre.

"Fragments" A Result Of Recovered Memory Therapy Or False Memory Syndrome ?

THE ETHICS OF UNNATURAL SELECTION

The French novelist, Georges Duhamel, predicted a scientific development now on the verge of realisation with the words, "Let us hope that the humanity of the future, governed by the new sciences, will engender as many outstanding men as it has produced hitherto at random and in ignorance". The quest for human improvement remains the domain of eugenics, a subject that has both fascinated and repelled. It is one thing to improve the quality of the human population but recent experimentation on genetically cloned embryos, replicas of human beings, is soon to be sponsored by Blair's government.

We have always defended positive eugenics, that is, the promotion of happy and healthy future generations as a matter of racial policy. This is both morally and practically justified and defensible. Who does not want to see the eradication of congenital diseases and other harmful inheritance? The current monomania of the Searchlight conspiracy theorists is a point of exception but then they see Nazis at every corner they turn and hate the idea of the healthy, strong and beautiful. We nevertheless draw the line somewhere, particularly after the government's "ethics advisers" have given the green light to the use of cloning techniques ... experimentation on two weeks old genetic replicas of human beings for research into certain diseases, beyond which it would not be permitted to develop into a baby. This more than implies the destruction of tiny humans ... something which we could never condone.

We know that Dolly the sheep was cloned from a single cell and developed into a healthy lamb. Cows, mice and pigs have hitherto been cloned ... so why not human beings?

Other unnatural methods have been employed in the past without reservations. Artificial insemination was one answer for eugenicists because, if you pardon the expression, it was readily to hand. Cheap and convenient, it offered one solution to the problem of random harmful genes being handed down. The only ethical problem with artificial insemination is who decides who donates the sperm. The American geneticist and Nobel prize winner, H.J.Muller, voiced his concern with, "If present trends continue, the whole world will become a hospital with even the best of us only being ambulatory patients in it". He was concerned that not enough steps were being taken to reduce the transmission of harmful inheritance and that genetics were not being used more actively to improve mankind.

Creation without conception is a course we would discourage for social and moral reasons. We do not seriously condone the breeding of human beings as if to exhibit them in the fashion of fine stallions or pedigree dogs. Nor do we wish to see the artificial duplication of humans as if they were mere commodities. In the novel, The Boys From Brazil , the Mengele character uses his medical skill to clone dozens of mini-Führers who pop up at various points in the world with some unexpected results. Of course, this is pure fiction but Hollywood's intention was to abuse artistic license in denigrating the principles of eugenics by giving it the "evil Nazi" tag.

With Professor Christine Gosden of Liverpool University recently saying the first application of human cloning "will probably be within a year of it being allowed", we can be sure that the day of the human clone is not far away.

No doubt, those cuddly folk heroes of trendy Leftism, Stalin and Pol Pot, will be favoured as likely candidates for this entry into immortality. Never mind all the current talk about using this experimentation for the purpose of eradicating diseases with the use of disposable embryos ... scientists do not accept moral boundaries when the impossible is likely to be achieved. Perhaps The Boys From New Cavendish Street will one day clone the wretched super-sleuth Gerry Gable ... his dubious DNA pumped into the unfertilised eggs of countless wealthy anti-Fascist harridans ... kick-started with some Frankenstein electricity to later appear out of every sewer in North London. These mini-Gables will have no mother or father in the conventional sense and no status in society; rather like the original.

That should be enough cause for concern!
